INTRODUCTION

This is a memorandum concerning the farm Glimme, in Voss, and its inhabitants, plus a genealogical table of Glimme generations, or as the old people in Voss called it, a branch of "Fute Relation." (Fute is a baliff or sheriff.)

No one is sure of the name "Glimme." The different explanations are vague. For instance, they want to connect the name with the sun's gleam because the early sunshine lit up the farm. At the same time, the whole north side of Vangswater was in the shade. Professor Olaf Rygh assumes the name came from the murmur of the small creek on the farm's east side; but in Voss they distinguish between murmur and glimmer. It is more reasonable then that the echo is the real reason for the name.

In pure Vossing (dialect) echo is signified by glum (lose the u-sound). Pronunciation is a sound between u, y, and o. Precisely, Glymme is pronounced the same way; the first vowel will be an inbetween sound.

From a lot of places on the farm, one can also hear strong echoes from the steep forest hills, especially during certain weather, such as fog. Echo or gloom presumably has given the place its name.

In the old documents the name is spelled alternately as Glymme, Glomme, and Glimme. Naturally, this is the reason for the difficulty in the right Vosse pronunciation. The way Glimme is written is very old. It is even used in the King's letter of Sept. 30, 1724, and later used most in public documents.

Glimme must have been a healthy place. The death rate among the inhabitants was very small. In one small house, for instance, there were only 2 deaths in the very large family in 72 years.

Until 1724 Glimme belonged to the big Finne estate, and the oldest inhabitants were tenant farmers.

The farm seemed to be owned, for a short while, by Major Stepha de Barckley, who bought it from Lieutenant Jens Nordal's wife, as landowner. According to the record, the Major was unusually strong. With his bare hands he could straighten a regular horse shoe. In his old age he got so big and fat that he had to hae help getting up from his midday slumber in the sun on the Glimme plain. The Major's horse was well known for his strength in fighting the bears. He was sort of a guard for the rest of the animals against the bears. Because of that, he was always sharp shod. But one time the hired man left the horse out in the pasture without shoes on his feet, and that time the bear got him. The place where they fought is close to the "Lingonberry Rock" near Gjellhamrene.

The Major had his cottage on Glimme-flaten by Satersgroen close to a deep large pool which made a dam for a small flour mill. He seems to have lived there for many years-before he bought the farm and chased all the inhabitants out. The old people talked often about "Glasston-holum (pond)"and the flats below Glasstovebaret.

DeBarckley had to withdraw from Glimme even though during the law suit he cited his real reason was "he had fallen in love with this farm."

Peder Knudsen Glimme, in 1724, took a trip to Copenhagen to see the King and complained about the injustice he and his father-in-law had suffered when de Barckley bought Glimme. As Peder stood before the King and told his story, he was holding his red knitted cap and, in his confusion, started to unravel the cap from the top. When he left the Palace, he realized what he had done, and most likely left all the yarn on the polished floor as a reminder of his visit. Apparently the King paid no attention to the incident against Royal etiquette, because Peder brought home a letter from the King, as follows:

"Fredrik the Fourth, with God's grace, King of Denmark and Norway, The Vendus and the Gothus (type of people) Duke of Slesvig, Holstein, Stormarn, and Ditsmarsken, Count of Oldenborg and Delmenhorst.

"Our favor formerly. Inasmuch as Peder Knudsen Glimme of Viger District Voss Sogn in Bergens Bishopric of OS, very submissive home petition, that his fader-in-law, in the year 1720, give up the farm Glimme, taxable value, with the understanding that he could live there, where he had lived for 50 years, in his frail and old age; of which farm, mentioned before, Peder Knudsen Glimme, before he got ownership from the beloved Lieutenant Jens Nordal's wife, as proprietor, had to pay a large and illegal amount, 52 rd. But as our beloved Major Stephan de Barckley desired to live and own the same farm, shall the, before mentioned Lieutenant Nordal next year have offered before mentioned Peder Knudsen Glimme, as leaseholder, the farm for 250 rds. as he also had received, then wanted to pay and present, even thought he made a promise to Major Barckley, having sold him the farm, without him knowing, for 270 rd., and the Major shall have, right away chased him off the farm. And thereafter, last April 6, in an extra court obtained judgment over him that he had to leave the farm and only get 15 rd. back of his paid Boxel money (mortgage); whereafter he humbly has complained that he and also his wife and 4 little minor children and also his old father-in-law will be left in utmost poverty, and asked that wemost graciously will recommend a 'lawyer' to handle the case against him. It is now herewith our most gracious will and command that you immediately appoint him a lawyer, who can justifiably prepare the case for him, with what for him until this day's met gracious granted benefit, on proper places without any payment after law. Whereafter you humbly know how to make right and will report to us that you have received this, our most gracious order. With this, our will commands you God. Written on our cattle Fredensborg the 30th September 1724. Under our royal hand and signature."

Fredrick R

The result of the earlier case about Glimme whereby Peder and his old father-in-law were sentenced to leave the farm, a gain for the Major, is proof that Major Barckley had the judge "in his pocket." Bits and pieces of the story are still found, and after this judgement the result was unthinkable.

The King apparently came to the same conclusion. He gave strict orders to the man in charge of court procedure for the legal division of an inheritance.

At the first case, Peder K. Glimme had with him 2 other men, who confirmed by oath that they could testify to the fact that the landowner was offered the asking price by the Major, in the meantime, had bid 20 rd. more and as a result got the farm instead of the owner. One of the witnesses was Anfind Ringheim; the other's name was Knud.

The new case, according to the King's order, is not known to be any different than that Peder Knudsen Glimme safely kept Glimme.

On the 25th of September 1751, Peder Knudsen Glimme willed the farm to his son, Lars Pedersen Glimme who married Ingeborg Claus' daughter, Finne, or Mossefin.

With this marriage, the Glimme family joined the "Fute Relation" and the pedigree (family tree) is as follows:

I. Henrik Milzow, Sherriff (or bailiff) in Preptow in Pomern, in the beginning of the year 1600. Married to Anna Hammemans. The familyname Milzow was taken after a small city, Milzow, in Pommern. His son:

II. Claus Henriksen Milzow, shopkeeper. 1586 elected to municipal judge in Bergen. Died July 8, 1595. He was married to Anna, daughter of Andrian Rother Falkoner, burgomaster (mayor) in Trondhjem for 70 years. He was supposedly over 100 years old when he died. Falkoner was a nickname he got because of his eagerness in hunting Falk (falcon).

Claus Milzow, supposedly, was a rich man. In 1591 he could be host to the Russian Ambassadors on their way to King Christian IV. Claus son:

III. Gerhard, or Gjert Clausen Milzow, shopkeeper in Bergen, married Margretha Ivarasdaughter Mork. He inherited his father's fortune and continued the same store in Bergen. His son:

IV. Henrik Gjertsen Milzow, born Oct. 20, 1599, died Nov. 19, 1666. Parish pastor in Voss. He finished his school in Bergen. Continued his studies in Copenhagen, Edinburgh and Rostock. In Copenhagen he registered as a student in 1619 with the institution in the community where young students got free room and board. In 1621 he enrolled as a student in Rostock. In 1622 he came back to Bergen where he became Superintendent with the Latin School, and Aug. 31, 1623, 25 years old, appointed as Voss parish priest, and in 1642 to Ecclesiastical dean (church district, including several parishes) over Hardanger parishes. In 1645 he was appointed Deputy for Bergen's Institute of Pastors when Governor Hannibal Sehested called a secret meeting on Akershus.

Milzow was a strict orthodox in his profession. He was very particular. He donated his own money to fix up Vangens dilapidated church; also gave a lot of land to Vangens poor widows house. Beside being an efficient clergyman, he also was a smart businessman with good economics. He acquired a lot of land and became a rich man.

He was married twice, first to the foreman's widow, Kristense Madsdaughter, whose father, Mads Jorgensen, was bailiff for Halsno monastery and Hardanger. The young widow of the 34 year old parish priest, Anders Buch, seemed to have much influence in the election of the young Henrik Milzow to parish priest in Bergens' largest parish. Her first husband, Anders Buch, son of Bishop in Bergens magis tray, Anders Mikkelsen Kolding and wife, Bodil Andersdaughter Buch, took their mother's name Buch. On Feb. 24, 1651, Kristense Madsdaughter died, and Henrik Milzow later married Kristense Jakobsdaughter, daughter of a judge in Gulathing, Jacob Jorgensen, and widow of the bailiff in Voss, Laurits Andersen in Lodve. From the first marriage, these children are known:

a. Gert Henricksen Milzow, born Feb. 16, 1629, student Dec. 20, 1648. June 30, 1657 received his Master of Arts degree. He studied in Copenhagen and with a number of German universities, also Wittenberg. The story goes that while he was on a trip through Italy and Tyrkie he was attacked by a gang of robbers. A woman supposedly helped him escape. In Vangens church is a sword hanging which he was carrying during this journey. For his rescue he had promised an offering, so after he got home to Vossevangen, gave a lot of his land to his dad's home for widows. In 1658 he was his father's curate (second pastor) and in 1666 Parish Pastor, after his dad.

He died in 1688. He was an educated and honest man, worked a lot on studies of antiquities and history. Of his memorabilia, the most known is "Presbyterologia." Vos-Hardangriana, written in Latin.

Gjert Henriksen Milzow married Susanna Schjelderup, daughter of the Bishop in Bergen, Magistrate Jens Pedersen Schjelderup and his wife, Inger Worm, who was the daughter of Professor Ole Worm, Sr. Of Gjert Henriksen Milzow children, known:

1. Jens, student from Bergen 1686, studied in foreign countries, was an educated man; wrote a number of articles in Latin. An accident took his life soon after he returned home
2. Henrik was both educated and rich; studied a long time in foreign countries, especially languages. He died Sep. 2, 1755, 70 years old, as landowner to Lekve Voss. He first married Else Alstrup, widow of the district judge in Hardanger MandrupNielsen Funch. He later married Inger Worm Furstenberg.
3. Susanna, married a first Captain, Rasmus Stoud; later married Lieutenant-Colonel Nordahl. By marrying her, he got the farm Lekve.
4. Margrethe, died unmarried.
5. Inger, died unmarried.
6. Christense, unknown.

b. Claus Henriksen Milzow will be mentioned later.

c. Mads Henriksen Milzow, became a student in Rostock in May 1653.

d. Margrethe Henriksdaughter Milzow, married Otto Hansen Schreuder, parson in the Nykirksen church in Bergen. From the second marriage to Kristense Jacobsdaughter:

e. Daughter Hilda Henriksdaughter Milzow married Axel Larsen in Voss. Of these Henrik Gjertsen Milzow children, more will be mentioned.

V. Claus Henriksen Milzow, sheriff and manager of the Finne estate, later owner of much property on Voss. He died in 1692 in Mossefin. He was married to Inger Lauritsdaughter, his stepmother's daughter, and whose father was bailiff Lauritz Andersen, from Lodve, Voss. Claus inherited almost all of his dad's estate and became a wealthy man. His descendants were, among the old people in Voss, called "Fute Relation." His daughter:

VI. Margrethe Clausdaughter Milzow, born in 1672 and died in 1763, on Finne. Married Knud Nilsen Sondve. And their son:

VII. Claus Knudsen Finne, died on Mossefin in 1736. Married to Britha Madsdaughter Saeve, born 1707, died 1792, daughter of bailiff Mads Saeve. Their daughter:

VIII. Ingeborg Clausdaughter Finne, of Mossefin, born 1727, died 1799, in Lunde. Married to Lars Pedersen Glimme, died 1766. Son of Peder Knudsen Glimme. He took the trip to Copenhagen to see the King. Peder Knudsen was married to Glimme, and his father-in-law had, in 1724, owned the farm Glimme for 50 years.

One daughter of Margrethe Clausdaughter Milzow and Knud Nilsen Sondve, names Kristense (also called Kirsten), married to Bryngel Torgeirsen Rokne, born 1695, died 1752. Had with him five children-Torgeir, Knud, Rasmus, Knud, Jr., and Dordei. Later, as a widow, Kristense got married to Glimme with widower Peder Knudsen Glimme, but had no children with him. So he, as well as his son Lars came into "Finne Relation" through marriage. Through generations, the members of the Fute Relation have had a hereditary trade unusually high, wide and rounded forehead. The one who wrote all this down is of this family and was through his youth teased a lot about his personal feature. Even people he did not know would say he was of "Fute" or "Glimme" relation. He supposedly looked like "Futen's father," namely pastor Milzow's picture in Vangens church. Of this "Fute Relation" in the 10th generation, came some years ago, some siblings, grew up in Nordland and Finmarken, for the first time to Voss, and right away, the old people recognized them as descendants of "Fute Relation." After Lars Glimme died, Ingeborg married David Lunde. Of the first marriage with Lars Glimme, only 2 children are known. Their son Claus lived first on Glimme, later on Gjostein. And daughter:

IX. Margretha Larsdaughter Glimme. Died 1797. Married Haldor Rognaldsen Haugo, died 1804. Lived first in Roe (1761) and Ton (1764), and Gjostein (1776). Finally went to Glimme Nov. 12, 1777 with his brother-in-law Claus Larsen Glimme.

Continuation of this relation as follows:

Because Haldor Rognaldsen Haugo is the 3rd generation in the following genealogical table:

1. Anbjorn Larsen Graee died in 1739. Married Inga Knudsdaughter who died in 1735. With her, Anbjorn got the farm Graee. We know about 2 sons:
 - 2a. Knud Anbjornsen Graee.
 - 2b. Rognald Anbjornsen Graee, later Laugo. Born 1699, died 1770. Married Anna Halldsdaughter, born 1689, died 1775. Five children are known about:

- 3a. Anbjorn Rognaldsen Haugo. Married Anna Nilsdaughter Gjelland, died 1817. 11 children
- 4a. Nils Anbjornsen Haugo, died 1851. Married Anguna Dugstad, died Sept. 26, 1828. Married the second time to Synnova Vinsand.

Nils fought in the war from 1809 to 1814; was the flag carrier; received medals for his war record. His courage was recognized. During one battle, Nils got lost. After a while he met 3 Swedish horsemen from whom he could not escape. He turned around as quick as lightning, put the rifle in the ground, and bayoneted the horse's chest and the horse fell. Nils then jumped a ski fence, but his belt caught on one of the posts. The horsemen tried furiously to kill him; they hit his belt only, and Nils fell harmless to the ground on a steep hill; rolled to the bottom of the hill and lay there pretending to be dead. The horsemen left, presuming he got what was coming to him. Nils lost his rifle; it was deep in the horse's chest. Later in the day they found the dead horse, proof that Nil's story was true. The horse was butchered by Nils' company and they lived on horsemeat for many days. Nils took the bridle from the dead horse with him to Voss, as a reminder of the incident, and it is still to be found on the farm Fitje on Voss.

He had a desire to learn; finished an apprenticeship in Chicago as a painter at which trade he worked for many years, but mostly did artist painting. Economically this was very good but his health couldn't take this kind of work. He took over his dad's property near Cambridge, Wisconsin, but suffered great losses due to two fires. In 1884 his house burned down and a few years later the farm's entire crops of wheat and oats. The insurance company refused to reimburse him saying the steam engine was used during threshing. Earlier he had also lost through a fire in Chicago.

In his early youth Knud had training in music and kept it up. His cultivation in this field was guided by capable teachers, namely Prof. Geo. F. Roast, organist F. Chant, and Professor Wemmerstad (Swedish), together with others. Knud published the first Norwegian Music Book in America. The Hendersons Hymmbook in 1865; the 12th edition sold out. The book contained 238 melodies (four voices exposed) and is most used among Norwegians in America. He also produced "Practical Musiclearn" plus his own kind of Music Table; 12 tables in one set for the piano as well as the organ. He also worked out tables for Salmodikon (hymmbook?). Knud also composed a lot of music which can be found in American as well as Norwegian music books. He also wrote some poems which will be published in the near future, together with a large collection of poems by Norwegian composers in America.

Knud also traveled a lot in America and in later years visited Voss, Norway, twice; also other places in Europe. Knud held positions of trust both political and social. For many years he was cashier with a railroad construction between London and Cambridge in Wisconsin.

Knud and Margretha had 6 children, all in good health:

Martha was a particularly good person, peaceful and patient, always busy. She was very sick during labor which contributed to her poor health in later life.

In contrast, her husband was of very good health, unusually strong, of good character, very funny, original, a perfect personality. Besides, he was eager and willing to start work. Lars was the youngest of 9 siblings. The financial situation in the home was bad and he had to leave home right after confirmation to look for a job. He got one as a hired man. Later he became a carpenter and construction worker, capable and competent in his work. He was also used as an assessor for public matters. In his old age Lars was a "pattern" of a beautiful old man. Lars Olsen Kindem.

with an unusually strong (good) health, a never tired eagerness, intellectual (talent) combined with the means to use them both in writing and speaking. Could Kindem also find time to do other deeds outside school. For example, from 1864-75 he managed the Voss Post Office; was also publisher and editor of 'Vossingen', and for a long time a member of the City Council where he was finally the Vice Chairman. Just as with his never ending zeal and real capability he took care of everything connected with school teenagers knowledge and religious education. He also had the opportunity to generously work. Through his many positions of trust, he did a lot for his home community. For many years he was the foreman in Voss Parish Council. Kindem's talent and capability made him perfect for a large sphere of activity (field of work) and no doubt would he, with honor, fill the place in the provincial council as well as on the Parliament (bench) whereas he, in a less exciting time, already maintained to substitute. Respected church member, a busy citizen, capable teacher, educator and church presentor, is with Ole Kindem's passing away. Very few like him are found in a community." 9 children:

His dad, Amund, was first a cottager on a place in Mo in Granvin called "Moatraa." He was a drummer during the war in 1809 to 1814; was promoted to battelion drummer. He owned a farm Lae in Tykkebygden, Uss. He bought the farm Himle where he lived the rest of his life. Amund was known all over for his jokes, as he always had them ready. He got away from "Moatraa" one night when his house burned down. He got his wife and children out. Everything he owned was burned; nothing was insured. Later, he said himself, the fire was a blessing because he got away from being a cottager.

Margretha Styrksdatter Glimme.

Knud R. Glimme was discharged from the Military on December 31, 1850 after 10 years of duty. For a long time he was a member of the parish (town) council, and School Board. He was Chairman for the Commission of Assessment, at the time a new commission law in the beginning of the Sixties, and very seriously was put into action in Voss. He was also the first librarian at Voss Public Library. He was a possessing and efficient person, with spiritual and bodily strength, but his work lacked design. When some large projects came up, he would ponder or brood for the longest time, just to postpone them. But when he finally got started, it was with vim and vigor.

When he was 18 years he was hit by lightning, on a summer farm among the mountains (Stolen). He suffered the consequences through his entire life. His whole nervous system was shocked. Later he could always tell when a thunderstorm was in the making. Then he usually went to bed or sat quietly in the living room. Also, he didn't like to be home when it was time for butchering the animals. He always took a trip away from the farm. Most every day he was melancholy, of few words, read a lot, and could catch on easily, even obscure philosophical problems. His writing was excellent, and he kept a clear and correct style.

His wife was of a different nature. She was not large but had a petite and neat figure. She was unusually strong and had a desire to start her day's work. She was "on the go" early and late; carried heavy loads of hay on her back, just as fast as the strongest workers, and at the same time was the soul of the whole farm work. She could web, weave, stamping, dyed and pressed the wool material. She sewed all her childrens' clothes. She also sewed caps for women to sell. She didn't need much rest; was the first one up in the morning and the last one to bed in the evening. At 4 o'clock in the morning she usually was "on the go" and satisfied with life. She would hum short songs. Her excellent spirit would catch the others in the home. She was in good standing with the neighbors. Many asked for her advice, which she gave as best she could, but she never meddled in their affairs without being asked. The children had a great love, respected her, and it marked their spiritual life. 9 children:

6a. Rognald Knudsen Glimme, born August 19, 1840. Married Margretha Styriksdaughter Hildestveit, born November 26, 1844; died September 13, 1911.

Rognald was first drummer with Sogn Corps for 3 years; later Sargent. Leader, Commanding Sargent, and finally in 1892 banner (junker). In 1900 he received the King's Medal of Honor in silver, with a diploma. In 1903 he was appointed Company Commander with the 3rd Company of Hardanger Infantry Battalion. All of Rognald's superiors praised his capability and dependability. 4 children:

Wife Anne Kristine, born February 19, 1830. Daughter of Jens Krog Offerso, and wife Gjertrud Bergitte Lind. Ane Kristine lived in Stavanger. Kristofer Schjelderup was the son of the parish priest to Lodingen Kristofer Schjelderup. Jens Krog was a cousin of Nordland's first Bishop Mathias Bonsack Krog. (See Genealogical table Krog.)

Johannes Glimme was in 1858 examined at Vangens Secondary School. A teacher first in Voss for one winter; 2 years in Strandebarne, and finally 4 years in Floro (Flora). In 1864 was examined at Molde telegraph station, as Assistant Telegrapher. As such he was on duty during winter fishing in Kinn and Batalde, 1865 till 1868, and the rest of the year office assistant to the district judge in Hardanger and Voss. In 1868 he was examined in telegraphy and language at Stavanger Telegraph School, and at the same time got a job with Kjeo Telegraph Station in Nordland. This station fast became the intersecting line for the northern part of Nordland, also Finmarken where there was a lot to do. Later this station was moved to Lodingen. Here Glinne was busy as Assistant for 5 years; member of the Board of Directors for 14 years. After that Administrator at Hammerfest Station for 5 years; telegraph treasurer in Stavanger 3/4 year; and finally head clerk, at the same place, where he is yet employed.

In Lodingen, Johannes Glimme was foreman for a long time in the Assessment Commission, Treasurer in the savings bank, and public trustee. In Hammerfest he was a member of the City Council, and construction manager for the electric plant. During this work he discovered in an out of the way valley that it would be fitting to build a dam of large waterfalls. The dam was so far unknown, without a name, so the Town's mayor called it Glimmewater. The main dam was finished after Glimme moved from Hammerfest. In the summer of 1909 the "Glimmewater" dam collapsed and about 3 million cubic feet of water suddenly poured out and damaged much in Hammerfest.

On the night of July 21, 1890, a terrible fire in Hammerfest damaged just about all the telegraph lines. As the fire was going on strongly, Glimme patched up some lines outside the city and on his own gave Tromsø authority the message about the fire; that the whole city would burn down and the people would be without food. The routh ship in Tromsø was stopped and food brought on the ship. At 5 p.m. the same day, distribution of the cargo started. Most of the inhabitants had not eaten all day. Hammerfest, by the way, is hadly connected to the Mainland. Glimme was recognized by the City Authority, as well as the people around, for this work.

From 1893 to 1900, Glimme was busy doing territory investigations, planning telephone and telegraph lines, and buying telegraph timber. During the winters of 1894 to 1897 he also investigated the snow situation on all the mountains he had in mind for telephone and telegraphs, between the East and West Coasts, all the way from Haukelidtfjeld and up to Grotlien and Stryn. In the summer of 1898 he built the telegraph line (about 240 km. long) from Kongsberg over Notodden, Telemark, Haukelidfjeld, Odda, Vossenvangen. The next year he built the side lines in Telemark, to Dalen and to Larrdal. The next year he became seriously ill ; was in bed for 5 months. An operation saved his life. Building of the lines had to be discontinued.

One election period he was a member of the Stavanger City Council.

During the disputed whale law in 1903 he wrote 2 exhaustive theses about the whale's importance to the fisheries, especially the whalings harmful result for Nordland and Finmarken. He received a lot of recognition for this work.
